

Production Leader

The Company

Our client is a well-established and well-loved NZ food manufacturing company based in Auckland. They are currently in need four new Production Leaders (2 for day shift, 2 for night shift) with food manufacturing and leadership experience to support the business as they continue to grow.

The Opportunity

You will oversee day-to-day production and be responsible for a team of up to 20 Production Operators, which involves training and hands-on leadership on the production line. This role also has a strong element of staff mentorship, encouraging your teams' development, performance, and engagement. Additionally, you will be responsible for meeting targets and maintaining high standards of food safety, quality, and GMP. You will be working 4 days on / 3 days off on 12-hour shifts which includes shift hand-over.

Requirements

As a Production Leader you will be someone who works well with others, is comfortable training a team, while also having the ability to work autonomously to oversee day-to-day production. You must have leadership experience and the ability to guide operators and help them to develop.

Applicants should have the following attributes, qualifications and experience:

- Production leadership experience in the food manufacturing industry
- Report writing and organisational skills
- Solid communication and interpersonal skills with all departments and levels (operators through to senior management)
- Positive attitude and ability to motivate, train and develop staff
- Continuous improvement, planning, and analytical skills
- Experience developing/implementing SOPs
- Production scheduling
- A relevant formal qualification will be advantageous

Benefits

This is an exciting and rare career opportunity with an innovative and successful NZ food manufacturer. They have a great company culture and working environment, including supporting staff development and training.
